

Biography of Marc Anthony Porch

Marc Anthony Porch has been a community advocate working in non-profit, corporate and political sectors establishing himself as an integral part of planning teams and campaign development. He has served on a variety of projects successfully developing educational, health, wellness, political campaigns and businesses initiatives in both the public and private sectors. Marc has focused on building strong partnerships and developing community alliances when working with teams. Demonstrating strong communication skills and tenacious networking strengths, Marc has become an advocate for social causes, aligning his skills with a focus on agricultural issues lobbying for equitable inclusion and diversity in representation in the agricultural industry.

Marc is a founding member of Think ReHemption an innovative, solutions based organization that advocates for environmental consciousness, diversity in agriculture and provides customized solutions for community issues. He currently serves on the strategic alliance team at Wilbur Wright Community College with a team of industry experts creating effective programs for the next generation of agricultural innovators. Marc has dedicated his professional career to advocating and his real time work gives him the opportunity to create change and improve systems for community. He is enthusiastic about developing partnerships with agricultural visionaries and leaders in the industry. This is a monumental assignment and he is prepared for the challenge to serve as an advocate for historically disadvantaged farmers. Marc is an active member of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity Inc. serving as a mentor to young men and taking his commitment to social service advocating for the next generation, diverse agricultural issues and developing generational wealth building opportunities like never before.